CANON F1 BODY (SECOND TYPE) RARE ORIGINAL KHAKI GREEN PAINT FINISH

One of the finest 35mm bodies ever made, Canon's F1 was offered as a versatile system camera for the serious professional. This is the second type, dating from the mid '70s. What makes this particular example interesting and highly collectable is the khaki green paint finish. While the roughly contemporary Leica R3 Safari is reasonably common, Canon's Khaki F1 is very rare indeed; we believe only 2000 or so were made, and few exist outside

Japan. So, look at the photos - you may never see another! Condition is excellent; near mint, showing signs of very light use. In terms of build quality, finish, and overall 'feel' the '70s Canon F1 was second to none. The paint finish is superb. And not only in terms of looks; in keeping with its status as a professional workhorse, it is very hard-wearing. The Canon F1 was a true flagship camera in its day - something any Canon user aspired to own - but sadly it was beyond the financial reach of most. It remains valued and sought-after to this day. Our example is in excellent working order; the mechanical shutter is fully operational. The original rope strap lugs are included, but no strap.

Postage charges; $10 UK; $15 Europe; $20 rest of the world.

Payment to be made by £UK Sterling bank draft, £UK Sterling International Money Order, UK cheque drawn on UK bank or by £UK Sterling cash. We also accept VISA, Mastercard, JCB and Bidpay.
